The responses to this question were quite similar in the cases of Spain and Ireland as well as quite varied, although the majority of scores were 3 and 4, respectively.

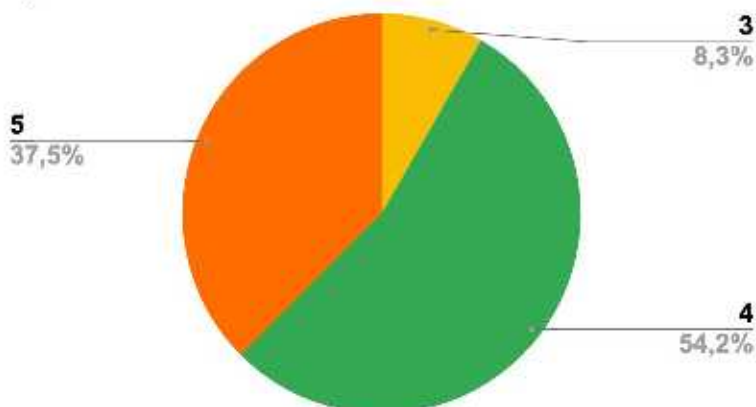

These scores show more knowledge and information based on the transition process in comparison to Sweden. In Sweden's case scores were somewhat lower, scoring 2 and 3, which showed less knowledge on behalf of Swedish parents.

2. Please rate how easy the website is to use with 1 being not easy through to 5 being very easy to navigate.

Spain

UK (Northern Ireland)

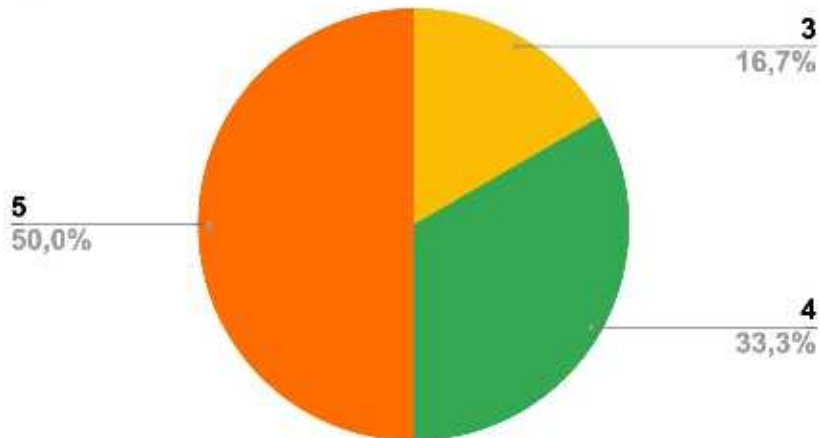

UK Ireland

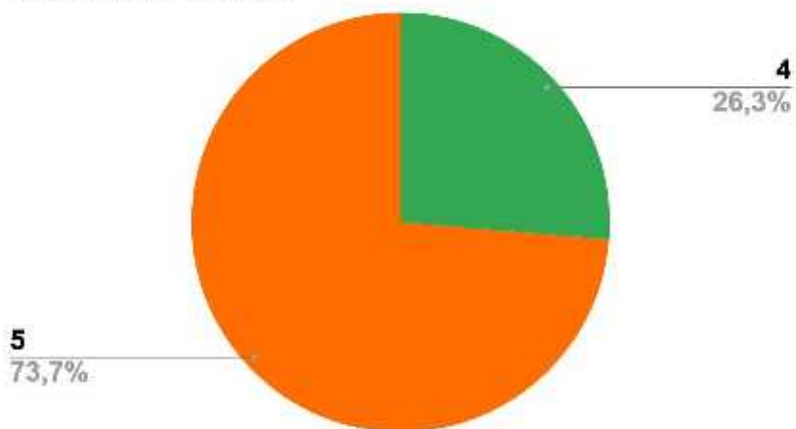

The charts of the three participating countries all agree that the website is quite user friendly, and easy to use (an 85% response rate between 4 or 5). The participants who had a score of more than 5 were those from the UK, perhaps showing more agility and know-how than the other respective countries, or simply having more experience with these types of resources.

3. Please rate how useful you found the information about the PROCESS, 1 being not useful through to 5 being very useful.

To be noted that this answer was not completed in the case of Sweden, as PROCESS has not been translated into Swedish, therefore I am not sure if this section was related to and exclusive to the legal process in Northern Ireland (in Spain it was completed but perhaps it should not have been included in this survey. Could you please confirm this?) Nonetheless, the majority response in all cases was 5.

4. Please rate how useful you found the information about OPTIONS, 1 being not useful through to 5 being very useful.

This section offers a number of post-school options, including legal provision of day care, training, employment, and daytime opportunities and how to access them. The results for this section are excellent for users in Ireland and Northern Ireland, with 95% and Spain with 87%, giving a score of 4 or 5. For Swedish users the scores are somewhat lower as only 64% have given scores of 4 or 5.

5. Please rate how useful you found the information about preparing your young person, 1 being not useful through to 5 being very useful.

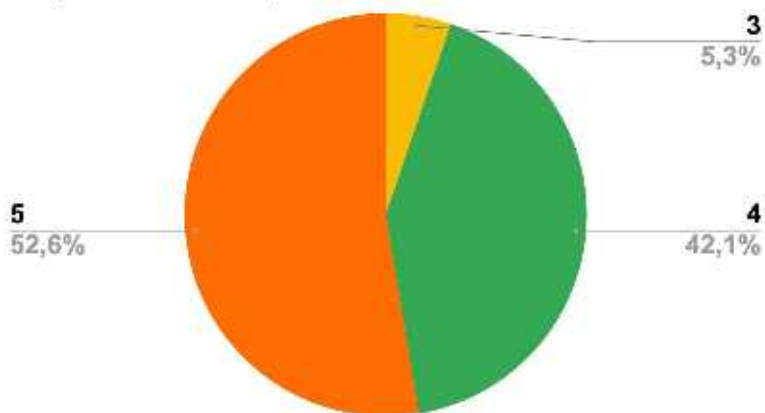

Swedish

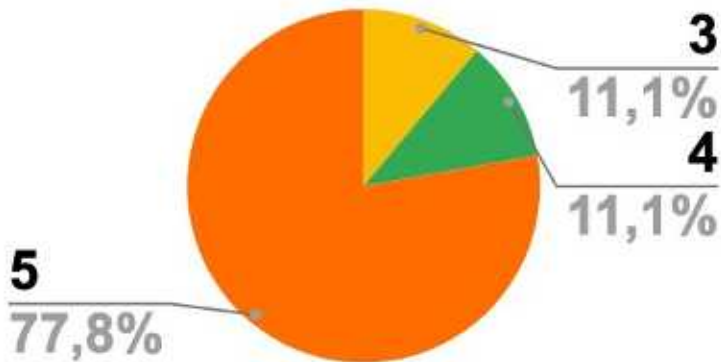

Spain

UK (Northern Ireland)

The preparation section includes action plans and practical tips on how to prepare your young person to leave school (tips for managing money, developing independent travel skills, staying safe at home while alone, and staying connected with friends via mobile phones and social media). Parents' assessment of the usefulness of these topics was medium/high. They considered most of them to be a foundation or a base that was either useful or very useful. In the case of Spain alone, only 8% considered this information to not be useful.

6. How helpful is the checklist and action plan? , 1 being not helpful through to 5 being very helpful.

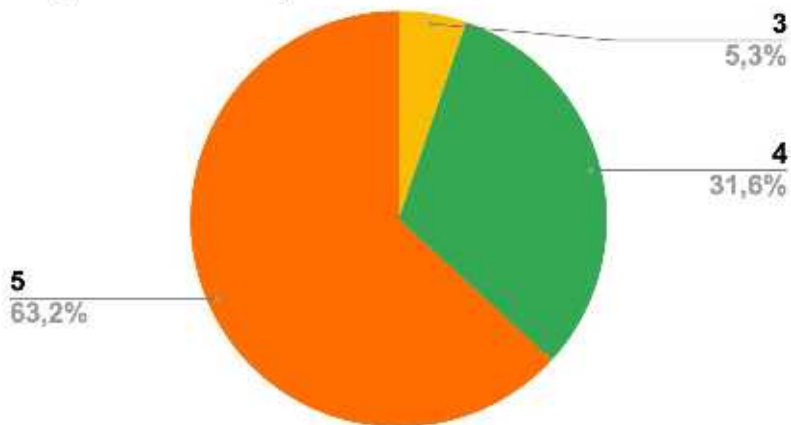

Swedish

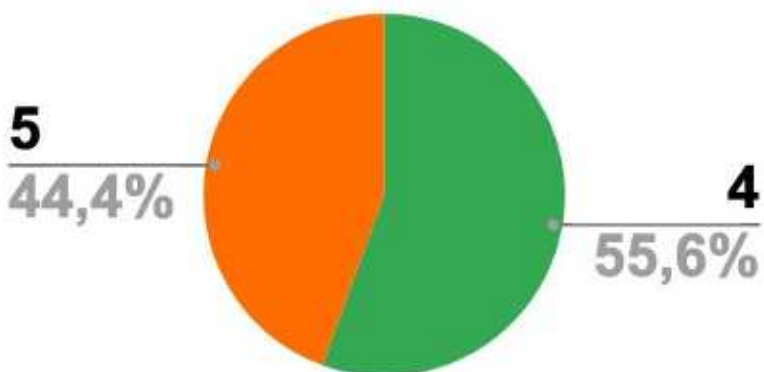

Spain

UK (Northern Ireland)

GENERAL DATAS

This question had asked parents to list topics they believed might be most helpful to their children.

Here is a list of topics by order of votes:

| | |
|------------------------------------|----|
| Money skills | 39 |
| Employment options | 34 |
| Healthy Living | 34 |
| Living Options | 32 |
| Mental Health | 32 |
| Day opportunities | 29 |
| Social Media/online safety | 30 |
| College/Training | 26 |
| Decision Making | 30 |
| Friendships | 30 |
| Staying safe at Home/ Community | 29 |
| Transport options | 22 |
| My Rights | 23 |
| Active Fitness | 22 |
| Community Contacts | 17 |
| Looking Good | 15 |

In order, the top topics that seem to matter most are related to money, employment and healthy living options. These are followed by mental health, social media, decision-making and friendships. Finally, the least important seem to be transportation, rights, exercise and personal hygiene options.

8. Is there any other information you would like to see included or other comments you would like to leave?

In general, the ratings of the parents are very positive, highlighting the quality and interest of the information provided and the ease and user-friendliness with which they access the website. In the section of personal opinions, several users suggested including more images and summaries in order to facilitate the understanding of some of the information.
